Torrey Pines (North Course)

Designer: William F. Bell 1965, Tom Weiskopf, 2016

The Torrey Pines North Course was newly Renovated in 2016 by Tom Weiskopf. It is the host of the PGA Tour's Farmers Insurance Open (along with the South Course). The North Course is shorter and less expensive than its brother. For many, it is more scenic than the South, having more picture-perfect opportunities along the track. The North Course is more popular for the less-experienced golfer but will still put up a good fight for the better ones. The North is bordered on its north end by the Torrey Pines State Reserve.

Fees (per player): $223 Mon-Thu / $257 Fri – Sun

Includes: 90 day advance booking, cart, practice balls, contest holes, scoring, on-site coordinator.

Torrey Pines (South Course)

Designer: William F. Bell 1965, Rees Jones, 2001

The Torrey Pines South Course is the more challenging of the two and is the host of the 2008 & 2021 U.S. Open Championships. The South course were originally designed by William Bell, Sr. in 1957 and are home of the Farmers Insurance Open PGA Golf Tournament (along with the North Course). In 2001, Torrey Pines South Course was renovated and redesigned by Rees Jones. The renovation and redesign made Torrey Pines South longer and more difficult. The South's teeing areas extend the length of this course to up to 7,600 yards. Golfers must also deal with the distractive view of hang-gliders and para-gliders, soaring and hovering at the edge of the cliffs on the south end of the course.

Fees (per player): $301 Mon-Thu / $354 Fri – Sun

Includes: 90 day advance booking, cart, practice balls, contest holes, scoring, on-site coordinator.
